Poetical.

A DEAD ROSE.

O Rose, who dares to name thee?
No longer roseate now, nor soft, nor sweet,
But pale and hardened, dry as stubble wheat—
Kept seven years in a drawer, thy titles shame thee.

The breeze that used to blow thee
Between the hedgerow thorns, and take away
An odor up the lane to last all day—
If breathing now, unsweetened would forego thee.

The sun that used to smite thee
And mix his glory in thy gorgeous urn,
Till beam appeared to bloom and flower to burn,
If shining now, with not a hue would light thee.

The dew that used to wet thee
And, white first, grow incarnadined because
It lay upon thee where the crimson was—
If dropping now, would darken where it met thee.

The fly that lit upon thee
To stretch the tendrils of its tiny feet
Along thy leaf's pure edge after heat—
If lighting now, would coldly overrun thee

The bee that once did suck thee
And build thy perfumed ambers up his hive,
And swoon in thee for joy, till scarce alive—
If passing now, would blindly overlook thee.

The heart does recognize thee
Alone! Alone the heart doth smell the sweet,
Doth view thee fair, doth judge thee most complete,
Perceiving all those changes that disguise thee.

Yes, and the heart doth owe thee
More love, dear roses, than to any roses bold
Which Julia wears at dances, smiling cold,
Lie still upon this heart which breaks below thee!

Elizabeth Barrett Browning.

SLUMBER SONG.

In the winged cradle of sleep I lay
My darling gently down;
Kissed and closed are his eyes of gray,
Under his curls' bright crown.

Where, oh where, will he fly and float,
In the winged cradle of sleep?
Whom will he meet in the worlds remote,
While he slumbers soft and deep?

Warm and sweet as a white blush-rose,
His small hand lies in mine,
But I cannot follow him where he goes,
And he gives no word nor sign.

Keep him safe, ye heavenly powers,
In dream land vast and dim!
Let no ill, through the night's long hours,
Come nigh to trouble him.

Give him back, when the dawn shall break,
With his matchless baby charms,
With his love and his beauty all awake,
Into my happy arms!

—Celia Thaxter, in St. Nicholas for August.

Select Story.

THE DUEL.

In the year 1801, when the peace of Tilsit put a stop to the conquests of Napoleon in Germany, the king of Prussia, exhausted by his astonishing efforts to maintain the war against France, reduced his army to the peace establishment. Consequently many officers who were stationed at Hamburg received furlough, or were dismissed from the service for a short time, and a life of military danger and activity gave place to habits of idleness and dissipation.

In the early part of the summer, several of these officers, having dined together and sacrificed rather freely at the shrine of the jolly god, adjourned towards evening to the Exchange Coffee House, the most noted hotel in the city. They entered singing and shouting in a most tumultuous manner, setting at defiance the rules of propriety and decorum. The youngest of the joyous band, the Baron de V——, who bore the commission of a lieutenant in the army, was about twenty-five years of age, wealthy, handsome and elegantly formed. But his mind did not correspond with his person; he was vain, insolent, self-conceited and presuming. When they entered the public room, they observed an individual of small stature, in a dark suit, seated alone at a table. He held in his left hand the journal of the day, while his right hand supported a pipe. He paid but little attention to the entrance of this formidable host of blackguards, scarcely deigning to raise his eyes from the paper he was perusing. The young Baron, doubtless offended at an appearance of indifference which he thought bordered on contempt, approached the man in black, and said, with a smile of bitter irony:

"Ah, my friend, good evening. From your appearance, I should take you to be a schoolmaster, or perhaps a tailor. Am I right? Where is your goose?

The citizen raised his eyes and fixed them for a moment on the countenance of his interrogator, and then resumed the perusal of the journal.

"God forgive me my sins," continued the Baron, "he will not answer me. Come, my little fellow, we must be more sociable. Ah, I perceive the reason of your silence; that pipe incommodes you. As I must hear the sound of your voice, allow me to relieve you."

So saying, he snatched the pipe from the hands of the stranger, and dashed it to pieces on the floor, a piece of wit which his companions applauded with shouts of laughter.

Without laying down the journal, the insulted individual turned towards the entrance of the inner room, and coolly said:

"Waiter, another pipe."

"Well done," resumed the young impertinent, "I have gained something, however; I made him open his mouth."

The pipe was brought, filled and lighted, and the citizen continued to peruse the journal as if nothing had happened.

"My little man," said the Baron, "where do you belong? In what village do you exercise your talents? What, no answer? Have you resolved not to enter into conversation with me?"

Here the insulted person again raised his head and looked the young officer in the face, at the same time puffing out an immense volume of smoke; he then deliberately resumed his former occupation.

"Perhaps I was mistaken in your character," interrupted the Baron; "you may be the quid nunc of a village, and perhaps endeavoring to commit to memory the news which that paper contains, to impart it correctly to your friends and neighbors. But you smoke like a Swiss. That pipe causes you much inconvenience."

It was a second time broken.

Without evincing by a gesture, or any visible sign of countenance, the least appearance of anger, the man in black coolly repeated the first demand;

"Waiter, another pipe."

"What a melodious voice!" resumed the Baron. "Such patience must be the attribute of an angel or a devil. I would give a thousand florins to see you in a passion; it would be delicious sport."

An old major, whose embroidered coat was decorated with military orders, and on whose German physiognomy was depicted frankness, true courage and loyalty, who entered the Coffee House with those hair-brained youths, now addressed the Baron in a low voice, but which, notwithstanding, could be heard in all parts of the room:

"My young friend, you are insulting a stranger without provocation; you are foolishly guilty of a great impertinence, and your conduct with that of your applauding comrades, begins to disgust me. I beg you will pursue this foolish joke no further."

The Baron, with his companions, accordingly adjourned to a neighboring room, and commenced playing cards. To judge from their numerous jokes, followed by loud peals of laughter, it would seem that the young officer's folly and imprudence were already forgotten. An hour passed away, all was mirth and jollity, the Baron had gained a considerable sum, and his spirits were proportionately buoyant, when the little man in black entered the room, and slowly approaching his chair, tapped him gently on his shoulder, and requested to speak with him in another apartment. The Baron regarded him with a look of disdain over his shoulder, uttered an ill-timed jest, and laughed in his face.

"Sir," said the man in black in a decided and manly tone, "you labor under a trifling mistake, which I must take the liberty to correct. I am neither a tailor nor a schoolmaster. I have the honor to be a post-captain in the English navy, very much at your service. You have insulted me, and I demand satisfaction. To-morrow morning, at seven o'clock, I shall await you here. Bring pistols with you."

The astonished Baron, who during this address had risen from his chair, changed countenance more than once, and then answered only by a low bow of acquiescence; he dared not trust himself to speak, lest his tongue should betray his terror. The captain politely saluted the rest of the company, and left the house.

With him departed all the gayety of the lieutenant. He became thoughtful and taciturn; his mind wandered from the game, and he soon lost more than he had gained. He was unnerved with terror, while reflecting on the consequences of his folly. What an advantage must an adversary possess over him who could bear with so much calmness a series of degrading insults, and who could propose a duel with such imperturbable sang froid! Such an antagonist must be singularly endowed with courage and skill. Such were the ideas that continually passed through his mind.

When the company separated, they all agreed to meet at the same place at the appointed hour. But it is not supposed that all slept equally well during the night. When they assembled next morning at the Coffee House, they found the Englishman before them at the rendezvous; but he was now dressed in a splendid suit of the naval uniform of his nation. He was attended by a valet, who carried a case under his arm.

He requested the officers to accept of some refreshments; and they entered into conversation, when the Englishman gave indications of possessing a cultivated mind and good breeding.

About eight o'clock he rose from his chair, and begged the Prussian officer to select the spot where their quarrel must be decided, adding that he was a stranger in the city, and that all places were alike to him. The Baron named the open pastures lying between Hamburg and Altoona.

When they arrived on the ground, the Englishman asked the Prussian what distance he would prefer. He answered:

"Fifteen paces."

"The distance is too great," resumed the Englishman; "you will miss me. Call it ten, if you please."

And this proposition was accepted.

The major now made the observation that the captain had no second.

"This is of little consequence," said the Englishman. "If I fall, my valet has my orders."

The major represented that such a proceeding was contrary to the usage in affairs of this kind, and that if such a formality were neglected the duel could not take place, but he politely offered to assist in that capacity.

When the ground was marked out, and each of the principals had taken his station, the captain asked his antagonist significantly if he had good pistols; 'for,' said he, "I have a pair which I often use, and which never miss their man. I will give you a proof of their excellence."

He then called his servant, and ordered him to throw something in the air. The man took a handkerchief from his pocket.

"This is too large," said the captain; "find something else." He took from his pocket a dried prune. "That will do," exclaimed his master.

The fruit was thrown in the air, the pistol was fired, and the prune was shattered into pieces. At this extraordinary proof of address, the spectators were struck with astonishment. As to the poor lieutenant, he was more dead than alive.

The captain than resumed his station, and requested his antagonist to fire; but the major interposed, stating that it was contrary to the custom of their country; that the offended party had an undoubted right to make the first essay; and after his fire was returned, the rest should be decided by chance.

"My friend," replied the captain, "if I should suffer myself to be influenced by your opinion, this young gentleman would never have an opportunity to test the quality of his pistols. I must hav my own way in this particular; and after I have settled the affair with this gentleman, each of his companions who amused themselves last evening at my expense, and who, instead of restraining the impertinence of their friend, laughed at his ridiculous follies, must one after another front the muzzle of my pistol. Now, sir, I am ready. Take good aim, for if you miss me you are a dead man."

The lieutenant presented his weapon, drew the trigger, and the ball passed through the Englishman's hat.

"Now, sir, it is my turn," said the captain. "I was last evening a butt for your railleries and your sarcasms. Without provocation, you insulted me, covered me with humiliations. I was a schoolmaster, a tailor, a village babbler. What am I now? A man. And what are you? A miserable wretch; a poltroon, trembling with fear. That death, which in a few minutes you will receive from my hand, already surrounds you with shadows. The grim tyrant's icy hand is already extended over you. Your lips are livid, your eyes are glazed, and your visage is as pale as the winding sheet which in a few hours will envelope your body. Your feeble limbs can hardly support you; insolence and cowardice go hand in hand together. But before my bullet pierces your heart, tell me, have you any arrangements to make? Have you a last adieu to send a father, a mother, a sister, or any other person who is dear to you? I have here the materials necessary for writing, and willingly grant you time to make any arrangements which you may think necessary."

The young man muttered something, of which an humble "I thank you" was all that was intelligible.

"In that case," said the Englishman, "since reconciliation between us is absolutely impossible, and it is necessary that your blood should wash out the affronts which I have received, I beg you to implore, by a fervent but brief prayer, the mercy of the Eternal Power."

Then, taking off his hat, he looked round upon the mute, terrified spectators of this closing scene, who, by a spontaneous impulse, uncovered themselves in like manner. For a moment or two there reigned among the group a religious and solemn silence, which was only interrupted by the hard breathing of the suffering lieutenant.

At length, seizing the pistol and pointing it towards the lieutenant, he kept him for a minute in a state of the most horrible suspense; then suddenly raising the weapon, he turned towards the valet, who stood near him, and handed him the pistol.

"Take it," said he; "this officer is not worthy the honor of dying by the hand of an Englishman."

The next day the Baron de V——quitted that part of the country, and never resumed his station in his regiment.

Cheap Bribery.

Chief Justice Pyne, appointed in 1694 to the King's Bench in Ireland, was a notorious bribe-taker. His decisions were always fair for the most liberal side. He had a property on the Blackwater, in Munster, famous as Waterpark, and a passion for good breeds of cattle, with which the place was well stocked. At the Cork Assizes he was to sit on a case in which the claims of a Mr. Weller were opposed to those of a Mr. Nangle, and on the day before he left Waterpark to hold Court, Mr. Weller sent him twenty-five splendid heifers and received a very gracious and reassuring message in return. The Judge set forth next day for Cork. When driving along in his coach-and-six, passing the bridge at the Bride river, the road was blocked up by a drove of cattle, a prime herd of most valuable short horns. The Chief Justice asked the man who was driving the cattle:

"Whose beasts are these, my man?"

"They belong, please your Honor, to a great gentleman of these parts, Judge Pyne, Your Honor," replied the countryman.

"They were grazing in my master's Mr. Nangle's farm, Your Honor, and as the assizes are coming on at Cork, my master thought the Judge might like to see that he took good care of them, so I'm taking them to Waterpark to show them to the Judge."

The Judge felt the delicacy of Mr. Nangle's mode of giving his present. Putting his hand in his pocket he presented the herdsman with a guinea, said he was Judge Pyne, and "that as his master, Mr. Nangle, had taken such good care of his cattle he (the Judge) would take good care of him," and ordered the herdman to drive the animals to Waterpark.

During the hearing of the action of Nangle vs. Weller, the bearing of the Chief Justice seemed at first quite in favor of the defendant, and that gentleman nodded often to his attorney, as much as to say: "It is all right; I have secured the Judge." But as the case went on and it was the province of the Chief Justice to charge the jury, he put the case so strongly for the plaintiff that, to the dismay of Mr. Weller, the jury brought in a verdict for Mr. Nangle without leaving the box, and the Judge certified for immediate execution. When, on his return from Munster Circuit, the learned Judge arrived at Waterpark, his first question was:

"Are the cattle all safe?"

"Perfectly, my lord," rdplied the steward.

"Con," said Sir Richard Pyne, putting on his hat, "I'll have to look at them myself."

The steward led the way across the lawn to a grassy paddock, and there were found within twenty-five fine heifers cropping the grass as happy as if their late master retained his property.

"I don't mean these," said the Chief Justice, testily. "I want to see those fifty short-horns which came after I left home."

"Bedad! the long and short of it is, them's all the cattle on the land, except what we bred ourselves, my lord."

And so it was; the sagacious Mr. Nangle had so timed the departure of his cattle as to meet the Chief Justice on the road. He had properly drilled his herdsman, who, with the tact of his country, relished the plot of "doing" the Judge, for Mr. Nangle had no great faith in the integrity of that functionary. The Judge's coach was no sooner out of sight than the herdsman turned his cattle, and before nightfall they were once more in the familiar fields of Mr. Nangle, where they were reared.

Experimenting on the depth at which wheat should be covered, the following results were obtained. Of fifty grains deposited at the depth of eight inches only two came up, and these formed no heads, at seven inches one-fourth came up but formed no heads. Ten out of the fifty came up when covered five inches deep, but had defective heads. At four inches covering there were a few perfect heads, but most were defective. Of those covered three inches all came up, but the best yield was from those covered only two inches deep.

A BENEFICENT ACTION.

The worn look and miserable feelings of those closely confined in mills, or at desks or work tables, are caused by weak stomach, kidneys or bowels, and show the necessity for some mild tonic to build them up. No one need suffer thus who will use Parker's Ginger Tonic; for without intoxicating it has such a beneficient action on these sluggish organs as to cleanse the poisonous matters from the system, that rosy cheeks and good health and spirits are soon brought back again. —Express. See advertisement.

A Very Shabby Old House.

The pretentious structure at Washington whose whiteness has for nearly a century given to it the name of the White House, by which it is known throughout the civilized world, is encompassed without by malarial breezes from the Potomac flats and poisoned within by venomous gases from imperfectly trapped sewer connections. To put a family to live in such a place is almost as bad as what was brought to light a few days ago in the lower part of Walnut street, where several children had died in one unpleasant dwelling owing to the noxious vapors they were compelled to inhale. There is more style about the White House than in the cheap and gloomy tenement, but foul air, which is no respecter of persons, is much the same in one as in the other.

When the White House was built it was a gorgeous structure for its day. Its original cost was over a quarter of a million dollars. Improvements and additions have since brought its cost, with that of the grounds around it, to six or seven times that sum. The house has been repaired and tinkered and patched and mended until it is now something like an old pair of boots which have been half-soled, heeled and footed a dozen times and badly need new tops. All that it contains in the line of modern improvements has been added in such a fragmentary way that it is like patches of new cloth on an old garment. When it was built modern ideas of heat and ventilation and water works were not known. The Potomac Flats were not what they are now. They have increased in size, in flatness and in malarious potency. To stay in the White House at night is to risk an attack of illness. As a residence it is no longer useful. To expect the Chief Magistrate of the nation to live there is absurd and unreasonable. It has long been known that the place is not desirable to stay in, especially in the summer. For years its occupants have found safety and comfort by going just outside the city to the Soldiers' Home. Recent investigations into the plumbing work of the White House have shown that there are some objectionable features which would not be allowed to exist in a third class inn.

Nor is there any site on the whole twenty-five acres of ground in the White House enclosure on which a residence for the President and his family could wisely be erected. Malaria from those pestiferous flats poisons the whole territory. The flats are growing worse and worse every year. It is suggested that they be drained. The suggestion is as sound as it is venerable. It was made long, long ago. To drain the flats decently can be done only by filling them up. It would take a dozen years and cost a million a year. Some of these days it will have to be done. Meantime a new Executive residence is needed. There are plenty of places in Washington for it, where the ground is higher and the air purer. We do not need such a costly building as kings and emperors are proud to dwell in. Half a million would pay for one quite good enough. The Chief Magistrate of this country has a right to a home. Now he has no house of his own to live in, but only some rooms in an awkward barn of a public building, the rest of which is made up of offices and is a tramping ground for the people of America and all the rest of creation who choose to go there. The President and his family should have a house in which he and they may be as private as the humblest citizen in his own three-story brick.

It is an evidence of the phenomenal strength of Mr. Garfield's constitution that he has lived for weeks as he has in that old house, breathing the mephitic air wafted into his bed-chamber from those villainous flats. No wonder he wants to be out. Let us hope he will soon be able to go where he can breathe almost any other atmosphere. One of the first things Congress should do when it next assembles is to decree the erection of a new and decent "White House." It will be an appropriate national thank offering for the recovery of the President. —Phila. Times.

Some Leading Questions.

A young man who looked as if he had a heap of things on his mind, but struggled hard to appear outwardly calm, put a $5 bill on the desk of a Detroit lawyer the other day and said:

"I want to ask you a few leading questions."

"Go ahead," was the reply, as the money was quickly thrust out of sight.

"If I am engaged to a girl and I go back on her, what can she do?"

"Sue you for breach of promise."

"But if she goes back on me what can I do?"

"Hunt up another."

"Um! Suppose I had presented her with a $2 fan, a pair of bracelets, a parasol and a ring?"

"Then she's so much ahead."

"If I believe that her infatuation for another is but a passing whim and I flourish with a revolver and talk of suicide, what then?"

"Her father would probably pick you up and drop you in the first mud puddle."

"Um! Suppose I had presented her mother with a 20 shilling umbrella?"

"Then she'll keep dry."

"And her brother with an accordion?"

"Then he'll worry the neighbors."

"Suppose, sir, I had, for the sake of making myself solid with the old man, presented him with a $16 watch dog?

"He'll set him upon you if you have any trouble."

"Um! Have I got no redress?"

"Yes, sir; go and lick the fellow who has stolen away your girl's affections."

"I'll do it."

"Glad to hear it. I'll defend your case for $20."

"Come to think of it, he's a bigger man than I am."

"Then let him lick you and I'll make it cost him $50."

"Um! I'll think of it."

And the young man took himself out.

A series of fatalities, accidents and crimes has occurred in Switzerland this Summer. Since the earthquake of July 21, and the storm which inflicted losses estimated at ten million francs, seven men have been drowned in the Lake of the Four Cantons by the overturning of a boat; a peasant of the neighborhood has drowned his lunatic brother in the same lake; three German tourists have lost their lives by a boat accident on Lake Constance; three young ladies, while bathing in the Aar, were swept away by the current and drowned; a young man has been drowned in the Lake of Bienne, and several deaths have been caused by lightning, sunstroke and the falling of trees. During a storm a collosal statue of Helvetia, which had been erected to do honor to the Federal rifle meeting at Fribourg, was blown down, and one member of the Reception Committee was killed. On the same day the murdered body of a young man was found in a public park and there is no clue to the criminal. THE WOUNDED PRESIDENT.

Last Monday the President was again attacked by nausea, and vomited several times. This was checked, and he rallied somewhat. His stomach retained a certain amount of liquid food taken in the mouth. One of the glands in his neck became greatly swollen and inflamed, and on Wednesday an incision was made to allow the pus to pass off. This operation gave immediate relief. The President's pulse has been very high during the week, but the temperature and respiration have been normal. The physicians do not despair of saving his life, but he is very weak and greatly emaciated. The President weighed 210 pounds at the time of the shooting; now his weight is about 125 pounds. There is a chance for his recovery, but the outlook is gloomy. The latest despatch shows but little change: pulse 106, temperature 98.5, respiration 18.

The New York World appeared in a new dress, including a new head, on Saturday, and is greatly improved by the change.

The Third Brigade N. G. P. went into camp at Wilkes Barre on Tuesday morning last. Fifty three companies, numbering about 2500 men, reported for duty. The camp was named in honor of the President "Camp Garfield.

According to the recently published report of the mine inspectors of the anthracite region, the number of persons killed by accidents in the coal mines of Pennsylvania during the year 1880 is 202, while 671 were severely injured. Many of the latter have died of their injuries since the report was made, and others are crippled for life.

Mr. De La Matyr, the Greenback orator, it seems, was addressing a public meeting in Wisconsin the other day when he made the imprudent statement that "no Christian could accept interest on money." Thereupon a Methodist clergyman in the audience, the Rev. Mr. Horton, arose and asked him: "How about the parable of the ten talents?" Mr. De La Matyr, being himself a clergyman, could not reject the authority referred to. It is said he was considerably staggered by the conundrum, and his answer could not be readily heard by the reporters.

Last week a thousand or more Sunday School children assembled at Chautauqua, New York, to listen to addresses upon moral subjects, and a nice treat they must have enjoyed. The speakers were "Smiler" Colfax of unsavory Credit Mobilier notoriety, and Gen. O. O. Howard the "Christian soldier" whose name is unpleasantly associated with the broken Freedman's Bank. The professions of this pair of mildewed saints were doubtless free from all allusions to bribery and swindling, and only the adults present on this occasion could appreciate the "irony of events" that brought forward these two men as moral instructors.

The Democratic County Convention of Luzerne county will be held on Thursday, September 22nd. At a meeting of the County Committee held on Friday last, the Chairman was authorized to employ two detectives to keep watch over the delegates and candidates during and immediately preceding the holding of the primaries and the Convention, with a view to the enforcement of the act of the late Legislature to prevent and punish bribery at delegate elections and in nominating bodies. This is not to be construed as a belief that there is any special corruption to be feared, but to show that the Democratic party has determined to have the law strictly observed.

With a view to affording relief to persons who receive abusive and annoying postal cards through the mails the following general instructions to postmasters will soon be issued from the post office department: When any one is annoyed or expects to be annoyed by postal cards, sent from any particular place or from any known person, he may direct the postmaster at the point named to destroy all postal cards addressed to him, or cards from any person named, so addressed, and as far as the discharge of the duties of the office permit sufficient examination, the postmaster should comply with the request. The same request may be made of the receiving postmaster. The direction to the postmaster should be in writing and should be filed for preservation.

During the late session of the legislature, an act was passed authorizing the the appointment of a mixed commission, to be composed of certain Senators and Members, State officers, and three prominent citizens to be named by the Governor, for the purpose of revising the revenue laws of the State. Governor Hoyt has appointed Hon. Charles R. Buckalew of Bloomsburg, John A. Wright of Philadelphia and Cyrus Elder of Johnstown as members of the commission. A meeting will be held in Philadelphia on the 30th inst. The work to be done is of the utmost importance and will affect the pockets of merchants, business men, land owners and corporations.

The whipping post of Delaware was an anachronism, because women were flogged for minor offenses. For such wretches as wife beaters, for the rowdies and ruffians who terrorize society with their fists and bludgeons, for footpads who commit brutal assaults to facilitate robbery, there is but one cure, the lash laid on by the public flogger till they learn through their bleeding backs what pain means and what society is strong enough to do in its own defense. Give us the whipping post.—Brooklyn Eagle.

When General Meyer, the Chief of the Signal Service, died, not long ago, one of the prominent aspirants for the vacant office was Captain Howgate. Fortunately for the good name of the Service he was defeated by General Hazen. Howgate recently appeared as one of the participants in a shocking social scandal, and now turns up as a defaulter to the Government for some $80,000. He has been arrested and compelled to surrender all his property to protect his bondsman, but the chances of the Government obtaining any of the stolen money, do not seem to be promising.

In last Sunday's Philadelphia Press was another contribution to the history of the last days of the Buchanan administration, furnished by Judge Black. It is even more vigorous and outspoken than the first and will carry conviction to the great majority of readers. The communications sent to the Press disputing the statements of Judge Black are all anonymous, and on that account are not entitled to as much consideration as are the utterances of Judge Black, who manfully assumes responsibility for his assertions. If these thick-and-thin Republicans in Philadelphia who assail the Judge, would sign their proper names to their writings, fair-minded men and women would have a better opinion of them and of their views than is possible at present

It takes four hours and a half to go, by rail, from Hazleton to Wilkes-Barre and so great is the dissatisfaction of the people residing in or near the former town that there is talk of seceding. It is proposed to annex the Hazleton region to Carbon county, the county seat of which can be reached in an hour. When it is known that it requires less time to go to New York from Wilkes-Barre, than it does to one of the largest towns in Luzerne county, the wrath of the sufferers can be understood and appreciated. Of course there is no necessity for this state of affairs. The Lehigh Valley R. R. Company could speedily remedy the evil by making a decent arrangement of trains, and perhaps will do so now that there has arisen such a storm of discontent.

The Presbyterian inquires whether the anti-prohibition vote in North Carolina indicates that on the great moral question the colored vote is not to be relied on? It looks as if that might be so until they are educated and christianized. What else could be expected of people lately in slavery, whose chief employments are sensual, and with limited moral training? The result is a very loud call for their education and elevation.—Press.

And what is to be thought and said of the Republicans in that State who voted solidly with the negroes against "no whiskey?" There is need of a much louder call for their "education and elevation." If the "moral training" of the colored people is "limited," what can that be of the white Republicans? The Press ought not to tramp on its party's toes so recklessly.

Several weeks ago the announcement was made that James McParlan, the famous detective who did so much towards breaking up the Mollie Maguire organization in Schuylkill county, was dead. It is now stated that this report was untrue and that when it was made, McParlan was hard at work hunting up the murderers of Maurice Healey at Dunbar. The statement that he was dead was purposely made, in order to avert suspicion when he began his search for the Fayette county Mollie Maguires. The promptness with which arrests were made, and the accuracy with which the clues were followed, show that McParlan has lost none of his skill and judgment. Eight men have been arrested, six of whom were released on bail and two confined in prison. Kane, the worst of these, has been denied bail, as the evidence is very strong against him.

There is a prolific crop of burglars this Summer and the valley of the Susquehanna has been chosen for their field of operations. Down the river the towns of Sunbury, Danville and Catawissa have suffered, and up the river robberies have been committed in Nanticoke, Wyoming and Pittston. These depredations are not the work of ordinary pilferers and shelf thieves, for in the majority of cases safes have been blown open and their contents stolen. A despatch from Wilkes-Barre states that detectives have been employed to discover the marauders in that region and put a stop to their work. It is evident that there is more than one gang of burglars, as robberies have been perpetrated in different sections at almost the same time. Although the losses, so far as known, have not been great, there is a feeling of insecurity extant, which will only be allayed by the arrest and imprisonment of the outlaws.

State Senator William T. Davies, of Bradford County, is a prominent candidate for State treasurer on the Republican ticket. Davies is a man of some shrewdness and by supporting Galusha A. Grow for United States Senator in the legislature, has managed to confuse the Republicans as to his exact status in the party. It is generally believed that he is a Cameron man, and that his support of Grow was only for a blind. This is probably correct as his leanings heretofore have been Cameron-ward. He has been making lively running in the campaign and his chances looked promising. Within a few days, however, J. T. Bailey, a regular machine man, solid for Cameron, has been brought into the field and, it is claimed, will have the Philadelphia and Pittsburg delegates to start with. It now remains to be seen what strength Davies has gained by his support of Grow, and whether Wolfe and the Reform element will stand by him.

Several of the up-river papers have stated that the Danville, Hazleton & Wilkes-Barre R. R. Co., has a chartered right to construct a railroad along the East bank of the Susquehanna. This right, however, only exists on paper. Some years ago when the North and West Branch R. R. Company began work, the former company was seized with a sudden spasm of energy and essayed to lay a track, in order to prevent the N. and W. B. road from doing so. An injunction was obtained from Judge Elwell which, after argument, was made perpetual, the Judge holding that the D. H. and W. Company had taken no steps to comply with the requirements of their charter and could not play "dog in the manger" by refusing to work themselves and also refusing to let others work. This injunction was taken to the Supreme Court and Judge Elwell was sustained by that body. The "right" of the D. H. & W. road doesn't amount to anything.

The life of James Buchanan, and especially that portion of it while he was President of the United States, was generally understood to be one of the literary undertakings which that accomplished scholar, William B. Reed, had on hand when he died some five or six years ago. To whomsoever the work has since been entrusted the long delay of giving it out to the world is inexcusable. It has occured to us, however, since Judge Black has been clearing up some of the obscure points of the Buchanan administration, that he of all the men who stood close to the Pennsylvania statesman would be the most qualified at this day for the performance of this task. It would be a fitting and graceful labor of Judge Black's declining age, and it would vindicate not alone Mr. Buchanan's career but his own. If the Judge should signify his intention to set before the world the true life of his illustrious friend, no one who may be now engaged on such a work would hesitate to yield to him.—Phil. Chronicle Herald.

What The Supreme Bench Needs.

The people are fully conscious, nevertheless, that the last three accessions to the supreme bench, those of Harlan, Woods and Matthews, were not of such a character as to add greatly to its authority or dignity. Each one of them owes his distinction to his appointment rather than his appointment to his distinction. No one of them had made a great reputation even locally as a jurist. These three men, with the next two to be appointed, will constitute a majority of the bench. The other members, Chief Justice Waite and Associates Field, Miller, and Bradley, though able and experienced judges, have no such superfluity of weight that the bench will safely admit of any further lightening. There ought rather to be added to its membership two of the very best jurists that the country can furnish, and they should be appointed for their ability and learning, their uprightness and judicial character, and without regard to political considerations in any narrow sense. —New York Times (rep.)

PUBLIC ENEMIES.

The socialists, or nihilists, of Switzerland are a peculiarly sanguinary and ferocious lot—at least so far as their utterances go. The authorities have prohibited the holding of a congress of socialists in Zurich next month and this has so exasperated these alleged philanthropists that they have addressed a threatening letter to the federal authorities warning them that the judges will first be blown up and stating that the socialists have enough dynamite to blow up half of Switzerland, and that it is in Switzerland that a conflagration will begin that will burn up the world. Pleasant citizens, those. Hundreds of just such miscreants find their way every year to this country, and come to the surface whenever there is a strike or any dispute between employers and employees. They never appear as pacificators, but always as inciters to riot. The honest workingmen of the country have no deadlier enemies than these disturbers of the peace, and should avoid them as they would the pestilence. They are not actuated by any true regard for the welfare of the workingman, but are controlled by a restless desire to break down all the restraints of law. Without capital all labor would come to an end and yet these socialists clamor for the ruin of capitalists. In the not-distant future this question of socialism will assume such proportions as to require a settlement by the government—and a vigorous decision too. Socialism means anarchy, bloodshed, ruin and despair. Fine words will not change its meaning, and the well-dressed, soft-spoken, plausible "friend of the workingman", of to-day, becomes tomorrow the red-shirted, bloodthirsty leader of a mob. One of these days the people will come to know this better than at present.

DYNAMITE DEVILTRY.

One Jeremiah O'Donovan, who masquerades as an Irish patriot under the name of "O'Donovan Rossa," has been presiding over a "dynamite council" in New York. This amiable body of conspirators assembled to perfect plans by which English shipping all over the world was to be destroyed. Merchant vessels in every port were to be blown up and in the opinion of the council it would be a pleasant sight to see "all the shipping merchants and insurance companies of England presenting a petition to Gladstone to reconsider the Irish question." The council did not mention what the authorities at the different ports would be doing, whilst this wanton destruction was going on, but it is to be inferred that they would congregate on the wharves to enjoy the spectacle. The council adjourned after observing that "the council expresses the opinion that after September 1st it will be well for all peaceable people to avoid patronizing ships that sail under the protection of the English flag."

Of course this windy nonsense amounts to nothing and, equally of course, no real, earnest friend of Ireland would have anything to do with O'Donovan or his associates. It may be however, that there are certain foolish fellows who will be deceived by this silly talk and contribute of their hard-earned money to the fund. The only good the "fund" will do is to provide dinners for O'Donovan and his cronies. No honest Irishman will permit himself to be swindled by such humbugs. Ireland's independence will never be gained by dynamite, nor by campaigns conducted by O'Donovans and "the likes of him." Should the members of this council put any of their little projects into execution, it might chance that their not too valuable bodies might be found ornamenting the nearest lamp post. This country will not tolerate assassins nor wanton destroyers of private property.

STATEMENT UNDER OATH.

A Startling Revelation of Suffering!

"Oh, My God, How I Did Suffer."

"I Earnestly Prayed to Die."

"I have been afflicted for twenty years with an obstinate skin disease, called by some M. D.'s Psoriasis, and others Leprosy, commencing on my scalp and in spite of all I could do, with the help of the most skilful doctors, it slowly but surely extended, until a year ago this winter it covered my entire person in form of dry scales. For the last three years I have been unable to do any labor, and suffering intensely all the time. Every morning there could be nearly a dustpanful of scales taken from the sheet of my bed, some half as large as the envelope containing this letter. In the latter part of winter my skin commenced cracking open. I tried everything, almost that could be thought of without any relief. The 12th of June I started west in hopes I could reach the Hot Springs. I reached Detroit, and was so low I thought I should have to go to the hospital, but finally got as far as Lansing, Mich., where I had a sister living. One Dr. —— treated me about two weeks, but did me no good. All thought I had but a short time to live. I earnestly prayed to die. Cracked through the skin all over my back, across my ribs, arms, hands, limbs, feet badly swollen, toe-nails came off, finger nails dead and hard as bone, hair dead, dry, and lifeless as straw. O, my God! how I did suffer.

"My sister, Mrs. E. H. Davis, had a small part of a box of Cuticura in the house. She wouldn't give up; said 'We will try Cuticura.' Some was applied on one hand and arm. Eureka! there was relief; stopped the terrible burning sensation from the word go. They immediately got the Resolvent Cuticura and Soap. I commenced by taking one tablespoonful of Resolvent three times a day, after meals; had a bath once a day, water about blood heat; used Cuticura Soap freely; applied Cuticura morning and evening. Result, returned to my home in just six weeks from time I left and my skin as smooth as this sheet of paper.

September 8th is the last day for registering for the election in November.

There was a festival in Afton on Saturday night last, at which our friends were present.

No aspirants for office have yet made themselves known in Sullivan county. Such reticence is rare and merits notice.

There was a perceptible frost in Rockefeller township, Northumberland county on the 16th inst. So says the Sunbury Gazette.

Mr. J. Salzer, sent one of his fine Estey organs to the Mountain Grove Camp meeting, where it gave great satisfaction.

Peaches are scarce and high in price and also of wretched quality. The Delaware crop was nearly a failure and Maryland and New Jersey have not been much more fortunate.

The Rescue fire company will hold a fair and festival in Evans' Hall to-day and to-morrow. Refreshments will be furnished each evening, and a good time may be confidently expected.

The showers which have fallen of late in this immediate neighborhood, have been so slight as to have done no good to vegetation, and were not sufficient to lay the dust.

The Rescue fire company had a dance in Oak Grove on Thursday night of last week and enjoyed themselves mightily. The Bloomsburg Cornet band was present and played choice selections.

It is proposed by the members of the G. A. R. of Wayne, Lackawanna, Wyoming and Luzerne counties, to hold a reunion at Wilkes Barre, September 17, the anniversary of the battle of Antietam.

In eating watermelons, be careful not to swallow the seeds, as they occasionally cause the forming of abscesses in the bowels. A man in Hoboken died in great agony only a few days ago, from this cause.

The camp meeting at Rupert had but a slim attendance on Sunday. A large crowd is expected next Sunday and we understand that a special train will be run over the Catawissa R. R.

'Tis said that where flies do most abound, there health prevails. If there was the vestige of truth in the saying, a man couldn't get sick in this town if he tried. "There's millions in it."

No additional cases of small pox are reported. Miss Sterner is convalescent and thought to out of danger. Evan Jones has been very sick but is improving and is not considered seriously ill. These are the only cases now existing.

Jacob Fisher, of Railroad street, whilst laboring under temporary aberration of mind, on Monday night, jumped from the second story window of his house, and fractured his leg. He has good medical attendance and is recovering.

We inadvertently omitted, last week, to notice the death of an infant son of F. P. Billmeyer, which sad event occurred on Wednesday. The child was not quite five months old. The funeral took place on Friday and was attended by many friends of the bereaved parents.

The Freeport (Ill.) Journal announces the death in that city on the 9th inst., of Mrs. Sarah S. Shannon, widow of the late Wesley Shannon, aged 73 years and 7 months. She formerly resided in this county and will doubtless be remembered by some of our older people.

By reference to our advertising columns, it will be seen that an excellent opportunity is afforded to visit New York and the sea-shore. An excursion via. the D. L. & W. R. R. will leave Scranton on September 6th, and the very lowest rates are promised both for fares and other expenses.

The new comet can now be seen with the naked eye, by very keen scrutiny. To tell the truth, this comet is not of the kind to arouse popular enthusiasm, and it is only bright enough to interest fellows who spend their time with eyes glued to telescopes, and who can get amusement from anything in the shape of stars and meteors.

Joseph Hess died of small pox on Monday night and was buried before morning. Mrs. Hileman died and was buried on Tuesday night. The Van Horn infant also died, as was expected. The death of Mr. Hess was the only one which caused surprise. Mrs. Hileman was old, feeble, and had been in poor health before she was attacked by small pox. As a rule, only those who were infirm or diseased, have succumbed to small pox.

Of what particular use is the town clock in its present condition? It does not indicate the correct time, nor anything like it, and is of no possible service to the community. If it is kept going for the purpose of exercise, all right, otherwise it might as well be stopped. The people would then depend upon their time pieces at home, and would know at about what hour to eat their meals, go to bed and arise in the morning.

Burglars have been frolicing through Danville and Riverside, committing many depredations but acquiring little money. They broke into four establishments and after hours of hard work were rewarded by $7 in cash. The burglars were bold but evidently not experienced hands at the business. It is well for our people to know that such thieving rascals are about, as they may find their way into this county when the Danville authorities make it too hot for them to prosecute their nefarious work in that town.

On Monday evening Wilbur Comstock, a patient at the Sanitarium, died of congestion of the brain. He was a resident of Goshen, Indiana, and was but 19 years of age. His death was not unexpected, as his health had been failing for some time past. This is the first death in the institution.

The Street Commissioner is doing a very bad piece of work in throwing into the middle of the street, the offensive matter scraped from the gutters. The odor arising from this decaying stuff is extremely obnoxious. The Council ought to stop this business at once, as the people in this sickly season should not be exposed to any danger of malarial disease.

The dedication of the Orangeville Union church and the bell memorial of Col. H. R. Kline, will take place on Thursday forenoon, September 1st. A number of ministers will be present. Rev. W. H. The public are cordially invited to attend.

Mr. John Cadman has reconsidered his determination to withdraw from the contest for the county commissionership, and announces himself as a candidate. It is claimed that he withdrew on account of certain representations which have proved to be untrue, and he is now on the war path and eager for the fray. His candidacy will make the canvass and convention quite lively.

Joseph Weaver, an old and respected citizen, died on Thursday evening of last week, aged 51 years. He was born in Bloomsburg, where he passed the half century of his not eventful life. He had long been interested in canal boating, owning several boats and numbers of mules. He was also the owner of a farm to which he gave much attention. Many friends will sincerely regret his death. The funeral took place on Sunday, and the remains were interred in Rosemont Cemetery.

There is nothing more delicious for breakfast than a perfectly ripe, sweet musk-melon, served in a proper condition of coldness. But the melon must be of the right kind and have a rich, full flavor. There are melons having the taste of squashes, and they are miserable apologies for the best fruit. The long, yellow melon is seldom sweet or high-flavored and are hardly worth buying. The best kind is the small, green melon, the rind covered with a network of lines and resembling a large nutmeg. Buy these, and you will obtain a fruit fit for the table of a king.

A clam bake at Oak Grove on Tuesday was attended by a large number of epicures. There were clamorous demands for the bivalves and such feats of gastronomy were performed as are rarely seen in these degenerate days. A couple of our most estimable citizens, after eating about enough clams to satisfy a fire company, were observed to shake their heads solemnly and remark, "No, sir, clams are hardly in season now, and are not very good." Their friends are at present giving thanks that clams are out of season. Had it been otherwise—

The Bloomsburg base ball club went to Hazleton last Friday, to play the return game with the nine of that place. Upon arriving, they found that, owing to a misunderstanding, a Nanticoke club with McCoy as pitcher and Steely as catcher, had already put in appearance and a game had been commenced. An explanation was made by the Hazleton boys, which was accepted gracefully by the Bloomsburgers, and upon invitation they remained until the following day as the guests of the Hazleton club. Our boys returned home Saturday and report that they were handsomely entertained and that they do not regret the trip.

A meeting of the Republican County Committee was held in the grand jury room in the Court House, on Saturday. The meeting was called by J. C. Brown, the Chairman, and was a shrewd dodge on the part of that gentleman. The Republican convention is usually held in the third week of August, but this year the State Convention is not to be held until after that date, and Mr Brown knew that he would not be chosen as a delegate to the latter convention, if the County Convention voted on the question. The Committee therefore postponed the County Convention until after the State Convention, and of course, it then became the duty of the Committee to appoint the delegates. Mr. Brown and B. F. Crispin, Jr., of Berwick, were chosen representative delegates. No senatorial delegate was named, probably because Mr. Brown and his little clique took no interest in that matter. We mention this interesting fact for the benefit of the Republicans of the county, who otherwise might not know what shrewd managers run the machine. Democrats see and know all these manipulations of pliant committeemen, but Republicans seem strangely blind and oblivious of their rights and privileges.

The Williamsport Sunday Banner of a recent date, contained an extended article concerning the State Normal School at this place. From this we make the following extracts:

A short time ago, while making a flying visit to Bloomsburg, Columbia county, we took occasion to make a brief visit and cursory examination of the State Normal School located at that place. This is one of the very best institutions of the kind in the entire country. It has been in operation eleven years, and is now established on a permanent basis. The Bloomsburg Normal School possesses some advantages which are not enjoyed by any similar institution in the State; a point which should not be overlooked in seeking a suitable place to pass through a normal course. Some of these advantages may be very briefly set forth. We know of no other similar institution in the State [illegible] in the art and methods of teaching. It was established by the State for this specific purpose and a student who graduates from the Bloomsburg school is exempt from any further examinations by County Superintendents, which no college nor business school can offer. Its graduates are prepared for the best institutions of learning in the country.

Bloomsburg is a beautiful village of [illegible] thousand inhabitants, healthfully situated, and easy of access by railroad from all quarters of the State. In no other institution of learning in the State can students receive such comfortable quarters and good boarding for such an outlay of money. The school buildings are among the finest [illegible] and facilities of the large colleges. The course of instruction embraces a thorough knowledge of the branches taught in Common schools, with the Scientific and Academic courses, music, fine arts, etc., equal to the best institutions of learning in the country.

BARN BURNED.

The barn of Lafayette Cressy, in Centre township, was entirely destroyed by fire on Tuesday night, together with adjoining sheds. The fire was discovered by Mr. Cressy's daughter at eight o'clock, and the flames spread with such rapidity that the buildings could not be saved. All the horses, five in number, were rescued. The barn was filled with grain, all of which was destroyed. A threshing machine had just been put in the barn and that was also consumed. A new buggy just purchased of M. C. Sloan & Bro., of this town, and several sets of harness, light and heavy, were burned. In the sheds were farming implements, a reaper, drill, &c., and these were all lost. The loss is estimated at $4,000; insured for about $2,000. The cause of the fire is not known. Some persons have advanced the theory that it is attributable to heat generated by the grain, and the facts are such as to justify this belief.

FATAL ACCIDENT.

On Friday evening last, at about fifteen minutes of eight o'clock, Joseph Schlotoman, a freight engineer on the Catawissa R. R. was crushed between two cars at Rupert, and instantly killed. Just before the accident he was busy making up his train, and went to the hotel, where after remaining a few moments, he purchased two cigars, and went away. He had complained of an attack of diarrhoea, but was not incapacitated for duty. When the time for starting arrived, the engineer was not to be found, and on search being made, his body was found lying across the track between two freight cars. It was evident that he had attempted to cross the track just as the train was backed to take another car and had been caught between the bumpers. The recoil separated the cars sufficiently to allow the body to fall to the ground. Death must have been instantaneous, and it is not probable that the unfortunate man even called aloud, as there were persons seated upon the porch of the hotel who could have heard any cry for help. The ribs on each side of the body were crushed and torn away from the spine. Schlotoman was a faithful and competent engineer and was held in high esteem by his companions on the road. He was about thirty-three years of age and lived at St. Clair, near Pottsville, where his widow and two children reside. The funeral took place on Monday, and a special car was attached to the regular train, to accommodate those who wished to pay the last tribute of respect to the dead.

TRAVELING CANDIDATES.

During the recent canvass in this county some of the candidates refrained from driving about hither and yon, begging for votes. Many, perhaps most, of our people appreciated this action and it is not probable that the candidates sacrificed many votes by remaining at home. The time is coming when the practice will be general. Each year, the farmers wax restive at being called from their work in the busiest season and compelled to listen to political beggars. It will be a long step in the march of reform when candidates appeal to their friends for support solely on the grounds of good reputation, intelligence and fitness for the office. Better men will be chosen than under the present plan, and candidates will not go into office when elected, loaded down with promises they never can, and never intend to fulfill. It is not alone in this county that the subject has received attention. The Bellefonte Watchman of last week, contains the following energetic words:

"There was one thing the county convention neglected to do, and that was to pass a rule forbidding candidates for county nominations to travel round for the purpose of electioneering. The thing has got to be an infernal nuisance and ought to be stopped at once. The proper mode would be for every man to stay at home and do his canvassing by letter, and by seeing such people as he can see at the county seat or at his home. The beggarly practice of traveling about from house to house and from home to house for the purpose of soliciting votes is contemptible at best, and should be done away with by a prohibitory rule of the party."

Those are our sentiments, and we hope the day is not far distant when all candidates who persist in personally soliciting votes in all parts of the county, will be ignominiously defeated in convention, upon due declaration of the facts. The best men will never get the offices, so long as good natured voters promise and give support to the first candidates who buttonhole them and who pursue not the first requirement for an efficient public official.

FIREMEN'S TOURNAMENT.

A grand tournament of firemen is to be held in Reading next month, in which companies from all parts of the State will take part. It is expected to be the finest affair of the kind ever held in Pennsylvania. The Rescue company, and perhaps the Friendship, of this town, will attend, accompanied by the Bloomsburg Cornet band. To those of our firemen who propose to participate, the following list of prizes offered for competition, will be interesting:

For the hose carriage making the best run, attaching and showing water, $500 to the first and $200 to the second

For the hook and ladder truck making the best run, placing ladder, etc., two prizes, as follows: $300 to the first and $150 to the second.

To the companies having the greatest number of equipped men in line, two prizes, as follows: $100 to the first and $50 to the second.

To the company making the finest appearance in line, two trumpets.

To the company having the finest equipments in line, two sets harness and belt.

To the best drilled company, the Braxmar medal

To the company having the finest steam engine in line, two service play pipes, one with variable nozzle.

To the company having the finest hook and ladder truck in line, a silk American flag.

To the manufacturers of steam fire engines showing the most proficient fire service qualities, two prizes as follows: $500 to the first and $250 to the second.

To the manufacturer of hand engines showing the most proficient fire service qualities, $50

It was resolved to charge an admission fee of $5 for entrance money for each company in the tournament. The committee adopted the Illinois state rules for all tests on steam engines, the rules for the committee, governed by centennial rules

ROHRSBURG RUMORS

Sickness here has not abated much, as there are now several, both adults and children, afflicted with dysentery.

Augustus Stauter, while hauling timber for his new tannery on Tuesday of last week, had his head and face badly bruised.

A much needed improvement has been made at the lower end of our town, by building an arch bridge over the creek.

T. J. Reese has bought the F. Derr property.

Mr Jacob Gerrard, has a very fine grapery, about one-fourth of a mile from our town, from which he makes several barrels of wine.

Mr. and Mrs. Savage, of Mahanoy city are visiting their daughter, Mrs. P. D. Black, of this place.

While J. P. and Clinton Dewitt were returning to town with a drove of cattle a few days ago, they encountered a huge rattlesnake which they succeeded in killing. It measured four feet and had eleven rattles.

Several of the people here will attend Benton camp meeting, which began on Monday.

By some means or other, we have been deprived of our daily mail. It is very inconvenient for the people of our community. Letters of importance must be sent to neighboring offices to be mailed or else remain over two or three days. While there is as much mail matter handled as there is in this place, a daily mail is necessary.

Perry, only child of Ellis and Sallie Conner, died of dysentery on Thursday night of last week, aged about two years.

LEWIS' LAKE.

EDITOR COLUMBIAN: There is no doubt that Columbia county possesses in an eminent degree, topographical beauties of vale and mountain and stream. There is no finer view anywhere, than can be enjoyed on the grounds of the Normal School and the grove adjoining them. And ascending the hill still higher, you command a view of fifteen miles of the winding Susquehanna, two or three of the Fishingcreek, not unknown to fame and the beautiful mountain on the south of the river, along whose base, in a few months, the cars of the North and West Branch Railway will gracefully wind; and when this is augmented by a full view of the fertile townships of Scott, Centre and Briarcreek on the south, and Bloomsburg and Montour on the other, a scene is presented to delight the eye. I once took John Campbell, the bookseller, to the points mentioned, and watched his outburst of silent pleasure for a time, he turned to me and said: "I have never seen anything equal to it, except the lakes and the vale of Killarney."

It has always been a source of regret to me that amongst our beauties we could not boast a lake.

I do not, of course, want one the size of Lake Superior, or even as large as Lake Erie, but a nice, "little, small" lake, about five miles in circumference, and a thousand feet deep, would be so handy to have in the county.

However, having none at home, we are obliged to go abroad, and we have a very beautiful specimen here in Sullivan county—formerly called "Lewis' Lake," but now "Eaglesmere," which I suppose is "high injun" for Lewis' Lake, but not being skilled in the dead languages, of course I am not certain.

A trip from Bloomsburg to this place, takes us over about thirty-five miles of pretty rough country, among saw mills and tanneries and hemlocks, whose product of bark and leather and lumber would be of value, if the markets were nearer. There is a cry for railroads, but few know the financial and engineering difficulties of building one through such a country. And they also forget, if they ever knew, how much and continuous traffic is required for the money in order to make it profitable. A single freight train would carry away all the bark now piled in the woods, and all the lumber stacked at the saw mills; but when the machinery would be put in motion and the millions of peeled hemlock now bleaching and rotting in the sun, would be manufactured and marketed.

Of the growing crops which we saw along the way, it must be confessed that not much can be expected. The corn, the buckwheat and the potatoes need the rain which has not been received, and the season is now so far advanced that the crop is made.

I observed one thing, however, which as Pepys would say, "pleased me mightily." And that is, that the population of this country has increased, is increasing, and judging from the small potatoes and few in a hill, the corn ear very poorly filled, and uneven buckwheat cakes may fail, but the crop of infantile humanity does not seem likely to be a failure of the early and the latter rain.

Another thing I observed, which did not please me so much, and that is, that from the time we left Columbia county, there was not a single guide board throughout that long and winding way. Nor indeed, did the people seem well informed of places and distances. The courts ought to be compelled to enforce the law on that subject in Sullivan county, as well as elsewhere. In Columbia county guide boards are very generally up. The railroads have the names of the stations which they pass. First, the name of the station is given, upon the road. A stranger coming to a little village does not know its name, nor its relative position nor distances. On the post office, the store or hotel, or some public place, ought to appear, and beneath, the courses and distances to the next prominent points in all directions.

When you get to the Lake you are said to be 1720 feet above tide water. The depth of it is reported to be anywhere from two hundred to five hundred feet. It is about three miles and a half in circumference, and on all sides but one, the hills rise above the surface of the water, from fifty to two hundred feet. Of course the surroundings are beautiful as at any such height any body of water must be. There are several rowing boats and a small steamer on the lake. The steamer makes three trips daily around the lake, carrying passengers and visitors at two for twenty-five cents, and one for fifteen cents. I have not been on the water and do not intend to go on—first, because I have a dread of water, and second, because of the big turtle, of which we have heard so much.

Whether the altitude will prevent my attack of hay fever, I cannot yet say. If it does, all right, and I shall stay for some time, if not, I shall go home at once. There are several patients here, and the location will have a fair chance to establish a reputation. I need not trouble you with speculations about the old glass works, nor the ancient Lewis, nor the modern Eaglesmere, which is the name of the postoffice, but it seems hardly likely to supersede Lewis' Lake, as the name. We are said to be about thirty-five miles from Bloomsburg, about sixteen from Hughesville, about nine from Laporte and about thirty-two from Williamsport. There is, by special arrangement, a daily mail, but it only daily here. It is the second or third day from centres of civilization. On Saturday, the 13th, the thermometer stood at eighty-nine, on Sunday morning it stood at fifty-nine—people got into the house about the stove.

Yours, JOHN G. FREEZE.

There is a dangerous counterfeit in circulation, purporting to be "Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer." BARBED WIRE are undoubtedly the cheapest and most durable fence made, is not affected by fire, wind or flood, does not cause snow drifts, takes fewer posts and stock cannot push it down. Our wire is four pointed, is made of two strands of number 12 best galvanized steel wire twisted together just enough to allow for contraction and expansion in Summer and Winter, barbs are fastened every seven inches. The use of barbed wire is no longer an experiment, as last year over one hundred thousand miles were put up. We believe our wire to be the best and cheapest now manufactured because it is made of the best steel wire and runs 15 feet to the pound having the greatest strength and visibility with the least weight of any made. Put up on spools of about 100 rods weighing about 100 pounds. Price per pound 11 cents by the spool, less quantities 11½ cents per pound.

Fish Culture by the Farmer.

Some years ago I conceived the idea of raising my own fish by the construction of an artificial pond. Near my house several springs broke out in the head of a small hollow, surrounded on three sides by small ridges or high ground. All I had to do to collect a fine body of water, was to build a levee or embankment of dirt from one hill to the other, which I did, about eight feet high, twelve feet at the base, sloping to eight at the top, taking the dirt from the inside, where I designed my pond, for the levee. This gave me a body of water covering some two acres of ground, with a depth of from two to eight feet. To prevent my pond from filling up I cut a ditch around it on the hillside, to carry off all the wash water from rainfalls.

The next thing was to stock my pond with choice game fish. This was easily accomplished with a net in a small lake four miles distant—such as white perch and black bass, both very choice game fish. I now have my pond well stocked with these varieties and the common perch that inhabits almost all the waters. With the hook and line I can, in a very short space of time, catch all the fish I want any day, and I can have them on my table every day if I want them.

Any farmer that has springs or running brooks on his farm can raise all the fish he wants for his own table and many more, at little expense or trouble, by the construction of artificial ponds. Game fish, such as I have mentioned, and trout, require pure water to do well; other kinds, such as the different species of catfish, buffalo and carp, do well in stagnant waters if in sufficient quantity. There is no healthier diet for man than game fish, and nothing easier obtained, and with very little expense. Why do not farmers then avail themselves of this wholesome and fine diet, much easier raised than hogs or sheep, and greatly to be preferred as a health diet? Nothing breeds so rapidly as fish, and the danger is your water will get overstocked. The day is not far distant when fish will be raised by the millions all over the country, and the farmer will find it cheaper and healthier meat than beef or pork.—A. Harris, in Home and Farm.

Pig Pork Pays.

Pig farming may be profitable or a source of loss. A few pigs of almost any breed can be grown on a dairy farm with profit, but if the number is increased the piggery may become an expense. It is clearly determined by a long experience that pig pork is the pork that pays. Young hogs marketed when a year old are much more profitable than older ones. This being true, and it is especially so in the older states—a breed should be selected that matures early and fattens quickly. The best pig has the least amount of offal in dressing; is compact in parts, and its flesh is of the very best quality. Of such are the Essex and Suffolk and some other allied "small breeds." One can "go further and fare worse" than to select the Essex for the piggery that is to make profitable returns. There is some prejudice against black pigs, but it should be remembered that the color is less than skin deep, and the blackest pig makes as white dressed pork as any other. There is money in pigs if a good breed is chosen and properly managed. The value of full blooded pigs over the "graded" is strikingly shown when a pair of the former is taken into a neighborhood where only the "common hog" was before.

Potatoes Under Straw.

Several years ago there was much said about growing potatoes under straw—and there are several reports from those who have tried the method with success. Interest in the subject appears to be renewed, to judge from inquiries. The method is very simple; the land is prepared in the usual manner and the rows marked off; the sets are dropped along the rows and very slightly, or not at all, covered with soil, and the whole field or bed, eight or ten inches in thickness with old straw. Nothing more is required until digging time unless some strong weeds should make their way through the straw, and these may be pulled. It is claimed that the yield is larger and the potatoes are much handsomer than those treated in the usual manner.

Logan Outdone.

Address of a Big Chief when invited to take a walk: "When the white father starts the music we waltz to it. We have been asked to irrigate the country here and hoe corn like the white man. Our hearts are heavy, and we cannot promote the string bean. We will do what is right, but we cannot work. The Indian cannot hunt the potato bug when the deer and antelope are ripe. He cannot dig post-holes in the hot sun when the chance calls upon him to go forth into the forest. Here, where we have roamed through the tall grass and hunted the deer and buffalo, the paleface asks us to dig irrigation ditches and plow the green earth with a rebellious mule. Here, where our war-cry has been answered back by the giant hills, we are told to whack bulls and join the Church. They come to us and tell us to go to school and wear pants. They ask us to learn the language and go to Congress. They send men to us who want us to learn to spell and wear suspenders. We cannot do this. We are used to the ways of our people. Our customs are as old as the universe. We scratch our backs against the mountain pine as my people did a thousand years ago. We cannot change. We can leave our land, but we cannot change our socks every spring and do as the white man does. We can go away from our homes and live in a strange land, but we cannot wear open-back shirts and lead in prayer. Warriors, we will go to the land our white father has given us. We will take our squaws and our yellow dogs, our wigwams and our fleas. We will go to our new home beyond the river now, and when the autumn comes we will take a bridal tour back to this country. We will construct a holocaust, whatever that is, and spatter the intellectual faculties of the ranches all over the country. This is all. I am done. I have made my remarks. I have twittered my twit." —Laramie City Boomerang.

We are so thankful to say that our baby was permanently cured of a dangerous and protracted irregularity of the bowels by the use of Hop Bitters by its mother, which at the same time restored her to perfect health and strength.—The parents, Rochester, N. Y. See another column. —Buffalo Express.

A Forest Scene Beside The Amazon.

On the third evening after our departure from Bogota, we encamped on the banks of the Rio Putamayo (a tributary of the Amazon), in a grove of majestic adansonias, or monkey fig trees. High over our heads we heard an incessant grunting and chattering, but the evening was too far advanced for us to distinguish the little creatures that moved in the top branches of the tall trees. The next morning, however, the noise recommenced, and we saw that the grunters were a sort of small raccoons, and the chatterers a troop of monos, or capuchin monkeys.

After a consultation with the Indians, we fastened our monkey, Billy, to a string, and made him go up the tree as high as we could drive him without betraying our presence to his relatives. We had no traps for catching them, but our plan was to let them come near enough for us to shoot one of the mothers without hurting her babies. Billy's rope, as we had expected, got entangled before long, and, finding himself at the end of his tether, he began to squeal, and his cries soon attracted the attention of his friends in the tree-top. We heard a rustling in the branches, and presently an old ring-tail made his appearance, and, seeing a stranger, his chattering at once brought down a troop of his companions, mostly old males, though. Mother-monkeys with babies are very shy, and those in the tree top seemed to have some idea that all was not right.

Their husbands, though, came nearer and nearer and had almost reached Billy's perch, when all at once their leader slipped behind the tree like a dodging squirrel, and at the same moment we heard from above a fierce, long drawn scream; a harpy-eagle was circling around the tree-top, and coming down with a sudden swoop, he seized one luckless mother-monkey, that had not found time to reach a hiding-place. The poor thing held on to her branch with all her might, knowing that her life and her baby's were at stake, but the eagle caught her by the throat and his throttling clutch at last made her relax her grip, and with a single flap of his mighty wings, the harpy raised himself some twenty feet, mother, baby, and all. Then we witnessed a most curious instance of maternal devotion and animal instinct—unless I should call it presence of mind: when branch after branch slipped from her grip and all hope was over, the mother with her own hands tore her baby from her neck and flung it down into the tree rather than have it share the fate she knew to be in store for herself. I stood up and fired both barrels of my gun after the robber, but without effect: the rascal already had ascended to a height of at least two hundred feet, and he flew off, with his victim dangling from between his claws. —From "Adventures in the American Tropics," by Dr. F. L. Oswald, in St. Nicholas for August.

A DIFFICULT PROBLEM SOLVED.

Ambition, competition and over-exertion use up the vital powers of men and women, so that a desire for stimulants seems to be a natural human passion, and drunkenness prevails on account of this necessity for bodily and mental invigoration. Parker's Ginger Tonic fairly solves the difficult problem, and has brought health and happiness into many desolate homes. It does not tear down an already debilitated system, but builds it up without intoxicating.—Enquirer See other column.

Directions
For Catarrh, Hay Fever, Cold in the head, &c., insert with little finger, a particle of the Balm into the nostrils; draw strong breaths through the nose. It will be absorbed, cleansing, and healing the diseased membrane.

For Deafness, Apply a particle into the ear.

ELY'S CREAM BALM

Having gained an enviable local reputation, displacing all other preparations in the vicinity of discovery, is, on its merits alone, recognized as a wonderful remedy wherever known. A fair trial will convince the most skeptical of its curative powers. It effectually cleanses the nasal passages of catarrhal virus, causing healthy secretions, allays inflammation and irritation, protects the membranal linings of the head from additional colds, completely heals the sores, and restores the sense of taste and smell. Beneficial results are realized by a few applications. A thorough treatment as directed will cure Catarrh. As a household remedy for cold in the head it is unequaled. The balm is easy to use and agreeable. Sold by druggists at 50 cents. On receipt of 50 cents will mail a package. Send for circular, with full information.

Ayer's
Hair Vigor,
FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

It is a most agreeable dressing, which is at once harmless and effectual, for preserving the hair. It restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray, light, and red hair, to a rich brown, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use thin hair is thickened, and baldness often though not always cured. It checks falling of the hair immediately, and causes a new growth in all cases where the glands are not decayed; while to brashy, weak, or otherwise diseased hair, it imparts vitality and strength, and renders it pliable.

The Vigor cleanses the scalp, cures and prevents the formation of dandruff; and, by its cooling, stimulating, and soothing properties, it heals most if not all of the humors and diseases peculiar to the scalp, keeping it cool, clean, and soft, under which conditions diseases of the scalp and hair are impossible.

As a Dressing for Ladies' Hair

The Vigor is incomparable. It is colorless, contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil white cambric. It imparts an agreeable and lasting perfume, and as an article for the toilet it is economical and unsurpassed in its excellence.
